

Daily Schedule Guide

The following guide is not meant to be rigid. You can adjust it to your liking and make your own meal combinations, but keep the general structure, ensuring that you are having all the food categories.

You must be drinking plenty of water. You can add citrus or other fruits to your water for taste and for antioxidants to begin a gentle cleanse. Though this is the Preparation Phase, your body may still begin toxin elimination and you may feel symptoms like mild headaches so it is crucial that you stay hydrated.

Every morning, you'll have 16 oz of warm lemon water (mandatory) on an empty stomach. Optional: add a pinch of sea salt or some coconut water for electrolytes. Pink Himalayan or Celtic sea salts are excellent. Do not use other low quality salts like table salt, for instance. Drink this at least 30 minutes before breakfast. Alternatively, you can take a shot of lemon juice and extra virgin olive oil if you have high quality EVOO. Drinking the lemon water or taking the shot each morning helps to get bile flowing.

Each day, you'll have a healthy breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Find ways to incorporate the other food categories like healthy fats, alliums, fiber, etc. in your meals. Put them in your salad dressings, sauces, smoothies, or juices. Get creative! Important note: enjoy your cruciferous veggies and greens raw, blanched, very lightly steamed. Do not overcook them. Aim to make breakfast and lunch your biggest meals.

For snacks, you can rotate between nuts (maximum 1/4 cup daily), seeds, dried figs, dates, black raisins, herbal teas, bone broth, fruits, smoothies, and raw fruit and/or vegetable juices. To avoid blood sugar spikes when consuming naturally sweet snacks, have some healthy fats, protein or fiber first. Use the herbs that are listed above for teas. Be sure to consume herbal teas throughout the week. You can mix and match and make custom herbal teas. Have fun with it!

You will also be incorporating daily movement into your routine. You do not need to do intensive, high impact exercises because your body will be restricting most of the glucose fuel to support your detoxification. You can take light 30-minute walks, do pilates, or jump on a trampoline. Find light to moderate exercises that you enjoy so you can keep your lymphatic system flowing. Be gentle during this period.
