

How to apply the oil of oregano

In order to attack the virus, you'll be using oil of oregano in three steps. Proper dilution is key for every single step as oil of oregano can irritate or burn when used undiluted. You'll begin these steps during Phase One and through the other phases.

Step 01: mix 4–5 drops of oil of oregano in at least 8 ounces of clean spring or distilled water. Drink it on an empty stomach. The more water, the less strong the taste of the oil will be. It's up to you how much water you want to add. Alternatively, you can mix the drops with a spoonful of unrefined coconut oil or extra virgin olive oil and swallow it instead if the taste is too strong with water.

Step 02: mix 2–3 drops of oil of oregano with one teaspoon of unrefined coconut oil or extra virgin olive oil. Place the mixture sublingually under your tongue and hold it there for 10 minutes. If you can tolerate it longer, you can go an extra five minutes. You should feel a tingle, but not a burn. Experiment with dilution ratios and adjust to the one that works best for you. Again, you should feel a tingle. If you don't feel a tingle, then you've added too much coconut oil. If it burns, then you've added too little coconut oil. Once done, spit it in the trash instead of your sink as coconut oil may clog your drains. You can do this more than once a day especially if you feel the virus fighting back with outbreaks.

Step 03: mix 3–4 drops of oil of oregano with one teaspoon of a carrier oil such as unrefined coconut oil or extra virgin olive oil. Do a patch test on your skin to see if it tingles or burns. If it burns, dilute it more. If it tingles, you have a good ratio. If it doesn't tingle, then you added too much carrier oil. If you are treating HSV 1, then apply the mixture to your temples. If you are treating HSV 2, then apply the mixture to your lower back just above your buttocks. If you are treating both HSV 1 and HSV 2, then apply the mixture to both areas. Reference the images on page 14. Gently massage the mixture in until absorbed. Do this twice per day, at morning and at night.
