

What's next?

Congratulations! You've done such good work. At this point, continue to replenish good bacteria with fermented and probiotic-rich foods to strengthen your immune system and make it easier for your body to fight off any future pathogens. You're encouraged to continue making good habitual changes to your diet and lifestyle. Though this particular protocol is not a slap on the wrist to never eat junk food, it's still a good practice to eat well. Try not to run the risk of compromising your immune system again. You aren't obligated to continue eating how you were instructed to, but it's still a very good lifestyle practice to adapt to. It'll be beneficial to you in the long run. But, no pressure. From now on, take good care of yourself. And, maybe think twice before engaging in your next makeout session, sharing a drink with a stranger, or using someone else's lip gloss. Stay vigilant. Well done!

